

A Sticky Thought

Sometimes OCD brings a sticky thought.
I can notice it without obeying it right away.

1 What can a sticky thought feel like?

It pops in again

It feels loud

It says
'What if?'

It feels urgent

2 Helpful things I can say

This is an OCD thought

A thought is not a fact

I can let it be there

I do not have to solve it now

3 What helps me next?

Name it

Take a breath

Tell an adult

Do the next thing

4 My sticky thought today

5 My brave reminder

Thoughts can come and go

I can notice and not rush

I am stronger
than OCD

I can notice a sticky thought and still make a brave choice.

The Urge to Do a Ritual

Sometimes OCD brings a strong urge.
I can practice waiting before I do it.

1 What can an urge feel like?

It says
'Do it now'

It feels
'not right'

My body feels tense

I want quick relief

2 Helpful thoughts

This is an urge,
not an emergency

I can wait
a little

The feeling can shrink

I can get help

3 Brave choices

Pause

Take a breath

Count to 10

Do another activity

4 Who helps me stay brave?

Family

Teacher

Therapist

Friend

5 My brave urge plan

An urge can pass, and I can practice waiting.

OCD doubt can come back again and again.
I can notice it and still move on.

1 What can OCD doubt sound like?

Did I do it right?

What if I forgot?

Am I really sure?

What if something bad happens?

2 Helpful truths

This is OCD doubt

One answer can be enough

I do not need 100% certainty

Maybe and maybe not

3 What can I do next?

Answer once

Move on

Return to my activity

Ask for support

4 My doubt today

5 My brave reminder

Doubt can feel loud

I can live with some uncertainty

I can be brave

I can notice doubt and still keep going.

Repeated Checking

OCD may ask me to check again and again.
I can practice checking less.

1 Things OCD may want me to check

Door

Backpack

Homework

Light switch

2 My one-check plan

Check once

Say "done"

Step away

Keep going

3 If I want to check again

Take a breath

Wait 1 minute

Tell an adult

Do the next task

4 My checking goal

5 My brave reminder

One check
can be enough

I can leave it

I am practicing brave checking

I can check once and keep going.

Repeated Washing or Cleaning

OCD may push me to wash or clean again.
I can practice doing only what is needed.

1 When OCD pushes washing

I want to wash again

I worry about germs

My hands do not feel clean enough

I feel stuck

2 What regular washing looks like

Wash when needed

Use soap once

Dry my hands

Go back to my activity

3 Brave practice

Wait a little

Touch one safe thing

Ask an adult

Let the feeling shrink

4 My washing plan

5 My brave reminder

Clean enough is enough

I can wash and move on

I am stronger
than OCD

I can do what is needed and then move on.

Repeated Arranging

OCD may want things to feel 'just right.'
I can practice leaving them as they are.

1 Things OCD may want 'just right'

Books

Toys

Pencils

Clothes

2 What OCD may say

Fix it again

Make it even

It is not just right

Do it one more time

3 Brave choices

Leave one thing a little off

Walk away

Do the next thing

Tell OCD "not now"

4 My brave arranging step

5 My brave reminder

It can feel uneven

I can leave it

Brave practice helps

I can leave things and keep going.

Waiting Before the Ritual

I can practice waiting a little before I do what OCD wants.

1 My waiting steps

10 seconds

30 seconds

1 minute

2 minutes

2 What helps while I wait

Breathe slowly

Count

Squeeze my hands gently

Talk to someone

3 What I might notice

The urge got smaller

I stayed safe

I kept going

I was brave

4 My waiting goal

5 My brave reminder

Waiting is practice

Feelings can rise and fall

I can do hard things

Waiting is a brave step.

My 'Not Right Now' Ladder

I can climb one brave step at a time.

1 My ladder steps

- | | | |
|--------------------------|------------|--|
| ☐ | 10 seconds | |
| ☐ | 30 seconds | |
| ☐ | 1 minute | |
| ☐ | 2 minutes | |

2 What helps me climb?

- | | | | | | | | |
|--------------------------|---------|--------------------------|-------|--------------------------|----------------|--------------------------|---------------|
| ☐ | | ☐ | | ☐ | | ☐ | |
| | Breathe | | Count | | Kind self-talk | | Adult support |

3 Brave check-ins

- | | | | | | | | |
|--------------------------|----------------|--------------------------|----------------|--------------------------|----------------|--------------------------|----------------|
| ☐ | | ☐ | | ☐ | | ☐ | |
| | I tried step 1 | | I tried step 2 | | I tried step 3 | | I tried step 4 |

4 Who cheers me on?

- | | | | | | | | |
|--------------------------|--------|--------------------------|---------|--------------------------|-----------|--------------------------|--------|
| ☐ | | ☐ | | ☐ | | ☐ | |
| | Family | | Teacher | | Therapist | | Friend |

5 My next rung

One small step is a brave step.

Choosing a New Response

OCD may ask for the old response. I can practice a new one.

1 OCD says...

Wash again

Check again

Ask again

Fix it again

2 My new response can be...

Wait a little

One check
is enough

Maybe and maybe not

Move on

3 I can practice by...

Take a breath

Do the next task

Ask for support

Praise myself

4 My new response for today

5 My brave reminder

A new response
feels brave

Practice helps

I can choose my plan

I can choose a new response to OCD.

My Brave OCD Card

I can carry my brave OCD skills with me.

1 Skills that help me

Notice

Wait

Answer once

Move on

Get help

2 People who help me practice

Family

Teacher

Therapist

Friend

3 My go-to sentence

4 What helps me remember?

Breathe

My brave body

Kind self-talk

Trying again

5 My Brave OCD Card

I can be brave.

I can wait.

I can answer once.

I can move on.

I can do the next thing.

My brave choices grow every day.