

8.5 Load, Pace and Routine

Identifying daily load and building a small routine that helps me feel more balanced.

1. What is putting pressure on me right now?

Write what takes up space, needs energy, and has been weighing on me in recent days.

2. How do I know I am overloaded?

Mark what shows up when I feel overloaded right now.

- tiredness, difficulty concentrating or remembering ☐
- irritability, sadness, or outbursts ☐
- physical tension, quick heartbeat, or stress in the body ☐
- procrastination or difficulty starting tasks ☐
- feeling stressed or overwhelmed ☐
- other: _____ ☐

3. What is important for me to keep in my routine?

What helps me feel stable, calm, or connected to myself? Choose 3 things that matter to you.

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____

4. Which break helps me?

Choose one short break I can take when I feel overloaded.

5. Morning / Afternoon / Evening —

one small thing that can help me in each part of the day

Morning

One small thing that can help me start my day well.

Afternoon

One small thing that can help me renew my energy.

Evening

One small thing that can help me end my day well.

6. One step for next week

What small, realistic, and clear step will I choose next week to reduce overload and keep my balance?

Who will help me take this step?

Balance is built from small steps, not perfection.

